The Scarecrow and Plow

Students will enter the fields of Camp Leopold to collect and investigate cultivated plants. Here at Camp Leopold you won't see a scarecrow because crops are planted specifically to feed the animals. Discover agricultural science and why wildlife biologists plant crops to feed and care for wild animals. We will compare cultivated plants to native plants to see the impact wise farming can have on the animals of Camp Leopold. Students will ride in the camp wagon to cover and discover all of the different crops and land management tools used at camp.

Team Challenge Course

Building group dynamics and teamwork to reach crazy new goals will be the focus of this class. Students will learn to work together and how to help each other reach new heights. Following this class, teachers will find their students well prepared to work together with their classmates for the remainder of their school year.

Creatures of the Wood

We will hike the forests of Camp Leopold to discover the complex environment of the upland forests of South Carolina. Birds, reptiles, amphibians, insects, and furry mammals are part of life in South Carolina and we will study them in their natural habitat. Mysteries that make these animals so fascinating will be discovered.
